

Outstanding alumni honored on Charter Day

Gallaudet marked the 126th anniversary of President Abraham Lincoln's signing of the University's charter on Saturday, April 7, with a day of activities highlighted by a 5-K to 10-K run with President King Jordan, an auction and flea market, and an evening banquet honoring outstanding leaders in the deaf community.

"Judging by the number of people and the participation, things were very well received," said Mary Anne Pugin, executive secretary of the Gallaudet University Alumni Association (GUAA), the group that hosts the annual event.

During the awards program following the Charter Day banquet in "Ole Jim," the Edward Miner Gallaudet award, which goes to an outstanding national or international leader in the field of deafness, was presented to Swedish educators Uldis and Birgitta Ozolin. The Ozolins have worked in Kenya since 1986 helping the deaf community establish independent living skills, and to date have assisted in developing a sign language and setting up the Kenyan Association of the Deaf.

Leo Jacobs ('38), a retired educator from the California School for the Deaf, won the Laurent Clerc Award, which goes to a deaf person who

Gallaudet will test new listening system

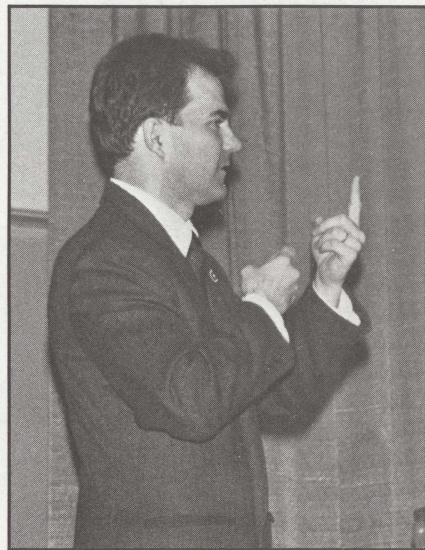

Gallaudet has been selected as one of six test sites for a state-of-the-art 3-D induction-based assistive listening/auditory training system.

The Gallaudet community is invited to a demonstration of the device on Wednesday, April 18, at 1 p.m. in Room 213 of the Mary Thornberry Building. Bob Gilmore and Norman Lederman of Oval Window Audio (OWA) of Yarmouth, Maine, will be installing the system.

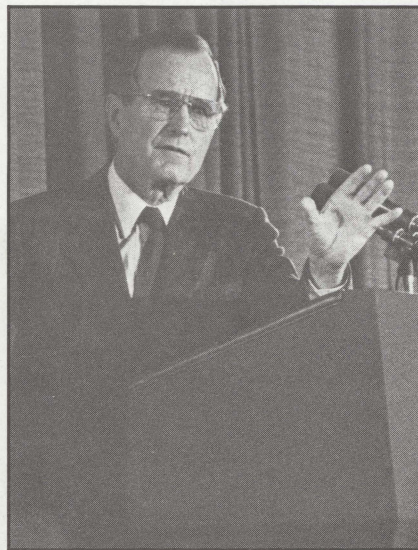

The 3-D system consists of a control box and a special floor mat designed to be installed under floor covering. It transmits a highly controlled and extremely uniform signal, regardless of hearing aid or telecoil position. The 3-D system receives the audio signal directly from the speaker's microphone or other sound source—for example, a stereo or television—and transmits the signal via electromagnetic energy to the listener's hearing aids.

OWA, a leading manufacturer of induction-based assistive listening systems, researched and developed the 3-D system with funding from the U.S. Department of Education through the

National news magazine covers communication issue

The communication debate at Gallaudet may soon gain national attention when the ABC television news magazine "Primetime Live" airs its coverage of communication on campus.

Representatives of the national news network were here for their fourth visit on April 3 through 5. The visits have included both on- and off-camera interviews with Gallaudet students, faculty, staff, and President Jordan.

These interviews have led "Primetime Live" correspondent Jay Schadler to three conclusions: Most students say their teachers sign so poorly that they can't understand them; deaf students lag far behind hearing students in academic achievement; and this academic lag may not be Gallaudet's fault.

The students are entering Gallaudet with a long history of structural problems in their education, said

Schadler, and then Gallaudet is taking over their education and trying to do the best it can. He also said he hears similar complaints about students not understanding their teachers at just about every major university he visits.

"Because Gallaudet is so important to the deaf community, we don't want to oversimplify the story," said Schadler. "Oversimplifying would be a tragic mistake. If we can't tell the story fairly, we won't tell it at all."

According to Schadler, the show's presence here stems largely from the research paper, "Unlocking the Curriculum," written last year by Dr. Robert E. Johnson, chairman, and Dr. Scott Liddell, associate professor, of the Department of Linguistics and Interpreting, and Dr. Carol Erting, director of the Gallaudet Research Institute's Culture and Communication Studies Program.

"That research paper touched off a debate about communication issues—a debate of national importance," said Schadler.

"Primetime Live's" coverage of Gallaudet is expected to air the last Thursday in April or one of the first two Thursdays in May at 10 p.m. on Channel 7.

Carbin named to Doctor Chair

Dr. Clifton F. Carbin, executive director of the Deaf Children's Society of British Columbia in Vancouver, B.C., Canada, has been appointed to the Powrie V. Doctor Chair of Deaf Studies for the 1990-91 academic year.

At Gallaudet, his primary activity will be completing his manuscript, Deaf Heritage in Canada, which is being supported in part by the Canadian Cultural Society of the Deaf.

The Powrie V. Doctor Chair, administered by the Office of the Dean of Graduate Studies and Research, was established in 1971 in memory of Dr. Powrie V. Doctor, who served Gallaudet and the deaf community for many years. It has allowed prominent people in the area of deaf studies to undertake projects at Gallaudet.

Carbin's selection was based on a recommendation of the Powrie V. Doctor Chair Committee, whose members are Dr. Catherine Anderson, Dr. Jane Dillehay, Dr. Doin Hicks, Mary Anne Pugin, Dr. Sally Revoile, Dr. John Van Cleve, Dr. Bruce White, and Dr. Michael Karchmer (ex officio). Carbin is expected to begin his work here next September.

(Clockwise) Interpreter John Mark Ennis signs for "Primetime Live" correspondent Jay Schadler who—while director Bernie Hoffman, producer Susan Adams, and Public Relations Director Muriel Strassler look on—interviews President King Jordan about communication issues.

Among Ourselves

President King Jordan gave the keynote address at the 18th Annual Conference of the National Coalition for Campus Child Care held April 4-7 at the Omni Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D.C. Gallaudet Child Development Center (CDC) Coordinator Gail Solit co-chaired the conference, and the CDC joined 15 other area college and university campus child care centers in hosting the event. The conference included a performance by the Gallaudet Dance Company. KDES supervisor Angela Bednarczyk and mainstream program coordinator Maral Taylor helped host tours of the mainstreaming program at CDC.

Dr. Bruce White, an associate professor in the English Department, has been accepted for a four-week summer institute, "From Romantics to Victorians: The Cultural Transition," in which 25 participants will explore new scholarships in history, literature, and art history. The institute is supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities and sponsored by The American University.

Carolyn McCaskill-Emerson, a career counselor in the Career Center, was the guest speaker at the Alabama School for the Deaf's second annual Black History Month celebration held Feb. 8-9.

Sy DuBow, legal director, and Karen Peltz Strauss, attorney, both of the National Center for Law and the Deaf (NCLD), recently published an article on current federal legislation on disability rights in the Clearinghouse Review. For copies of the article, call NCLD at x5373.

Dr. J. Matt Searls, a placement counselor in the Career Center, presented his doctoral research study, "Parental Deafness as a Factor in Self-concept of Deaf and Hearing College Students," on Feb. 20 in Ely Center. Searls' presentation was sponsored by a group of deaf parents at Gallaudet who have common concerns and interests in rearing deaf and hearing children.

Dr. Constantina Mitchell, an assistant professor in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, delivered a paper on Quebec writer Anne Hebert at the Southeast Conference on Foreign Languages and Literatures held recently at Rollins College in Winter Park, Fla. She also chaired the conference session on 16th and 17th century French literature. Earlier this year, Mitchell spoke on processional imagery in Hebert's latest novel at the San Francisco convention of the Association for Canadian Studies in the United States.

Dr. Jeffrey Davis, an instructor in the Department of Linguistics and Interpreting, successfully defended his dissertation, "Interpreting in a Language Contact Situation: The Case of English-to-ASL Interpretation," on March 20 at the University of New Mexico, thus completing his doctorate in educational linguistics.

Dr. Samuel Trychin, of Graduate Studies and Research, and Scott Bally, a speech pathologist in the Department of Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology, edited A Newcomer's Guide to an Old Problem: Hearing Loss, which was recently published by Self Help for Hard of Hearing People, Inc. (SHHH) Publications. The book was produced by faculty, professional staff, and graduate students who participated in the "Coping Strategies for Professionals" course.

Dr. Michael Deninger, dean of Pre-College Programs, will chair the five-member Middle States Evaluation Team for the Cleary School for the Deaf in Ronkonkoma, N.Y. The team plans to conduct its evaluation April 24-27.

Tim McCarty, artistic director, and Myra Coffield, technical director, both of MSSD's Performing Arts Program, coordinated MSSD Road Show performances held on April 4 at Thomas Claggett Elementary School in District Heights, Md., and Groveton Elementary School in Alexandria, Va. The shows included signed songs and dance, and workshops in creative sign language and theater games.

Dr. Margaret Hallau, acting principal for KDES, conducted a training session for teachers, administrators, and support personnel from various educational settings at the Wyoming School for the Deaf in Casper, Wyo., on April 6. The workshop was an initial step toward developing statewide curriculum guidelines.

KDES intermediate student Louise Stern placed fifth out of 17 contestants on the state level of the National Geography Bee held in Washington, D.C., on March 30. This was the second annual geography bee. Last year's participant from KDES, Hildur Jonnsson, placed fifth out of 30 students and is now a freshman at MSSD.

Cynthia Edwards, assistant professor of English at the Northwest Campus, will direct the New Student Orientation for preparatory students Aug. 19 through Sept. 1, 1990. The yearly program includes workshops, meetings, minicourses, and testing.

Assistant teacher Jum Reilly and kindergarten students at the Child Development Center look at the children's artwork that was on display in a special showing March 29.

makes outstanding social contributions. Jacobs is also the author of A Deaf Adult Speaks Out, the first recipient of the Powrie V. Doctor Chair of Deaf Studies, and a GUAA board member for the past 23 years.

Alice Hagemeyer ('57), won the Alice Cogswell Award, given for valuable service on behalf of the deaf community. Hagemeyer is a community librarian for the District of Columbia Public Libraries, the vice president of the GUAA board, and a strong advocate for deaf awareness among hearing and deaf people.

Sterling White ('59), a chemist for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., received the Amos Kendall Award, which goes to a deaf person excelling in a professional field.

The Outstanding Young Alumnus Award, which goes to a graduate from the University within the past 15 years who makes significant professional contributions, went to Stephen Hlibok ('85), a financial consultant and stockbroker for Merrill Lynch and Co. Inc.

Pugin noted that this was the first Charter Day for fundraising activities, such as the flea market; the auction of a dinner with King and Linda Jordan, a weekend at the shore, and a boat ride on the Chesapeake Bay; and a raffle for a free champagne hot air balloon ride—all to benefit the Laurent Clerc Cultural Fund (LCCF). She estimated that $3,000 was raised for the fund, which is used to promote activities for the cultural enrichment of the deaf community.

Pugin added that 500 "blocks" of a 32x40 photo "puzzle" of Dr. Jordan started selling on Charter Day for $2 a piece to raise an additional $1,000 for LCCF. Anyone interested in buying a piece of the photo and placing it in its appropriate spot on the puzzle can do so by coming by "Ole Jim."

Gallaudet wants your good ideas for Community Involvement Program

Do you have any ideas for ways to save the University money? Generate income? Improve program quality? Improve service efficiency? Enhance the environment? Benefit the Gallaudet community at large?

The Gallaudet Community Involvement Program has been established to encourage faculty and staff to provide ideas that will contribute to the growth and development of the University or have a positive impact on Gallaudet's resources.

A program of the Staff Advisory Committee, the Community Involvement Program will be administered by the Office of Administrative and Community Services.

Ideas or suggestions will be categorized as either financial or community improvements. Financial improvements that are implemented successfully will be rewarded monetarily, and successful community improvement ideas will be recognized with a gift. All suggestions will be reviewed and evaluated, and, if implemented, will be formally recognized.

Employees will soon receive brochures explaining in detail the program and the procedures for submitting suggestions or ideas. Forms may be picked up from the Office of Administrative and Community Services, College Hall, Room 4.

Gallaudet Press adds updated and new books to catalog

A documentation of the giant steps that the deaf community has made over the past decade is the subject of one of the four books that The Gallaudet University Press has added to its catalog.

The Other Side of Silence, by Arden Neisser, is actually an update of a book that the Press' marketing specialist, Dan Wallace, calls "a classic. It was one of the first popular trade books exploring issues of deafness."

Through interviews with the deaf community, Neisser tells of how deaf people's lives have changed during the past decade in a variety of areas. "The book starkly shows what a difference 10 years has made," said Wallace. "It's remarkable to see people's perspectives then and now."

Wallace added that the updated foreword in the book makes it clear that there is still a fight ahead for deaf people to gain equal rights in education, employment, and many other areas.

Speak to Me!, by Marcia Calhoun Forecki, a true story about a single parent's discovery that her 18-month-old son is deaf, is also a reprint of a very popular title, Wallace said. The updated foreword to the new edition tells how Forecki's son Charlie, now 10, is doing today.

The Secret in the Dorm Attic, by Jean F. Andrews, is a new mystery in the Flying Fingers Club adventure series for elementary school readers. Two of the club's main characters, a deaf boy and his hearing friend, find adventure in a residential school for deaf people, and the hearing boy gets a firsthand look at a different culture.

Annie's World, by Nancy Smiler Levinson, tells about a 16-year-old hard of hearing girl's adjustment problems when her father takes her out of the private school she has grown up in and mainstreams her in public school.

All of the titles can be found in the Gallaudet Bookstore, or by contacting the Press directly. The books also can be ordered from area bookstores.

Rehearsing a scene from the MSSD spring production of "Working" are Erika Harper, Carla Shird, assistant director Mike Lamitola, Wanda Taveras, and Billie Jean Nelson.

MSSD Performing Arts Department to present Studs Terkel's 'Working'

Vignettes of America's workforce will be performed on the MSSD stage next month when the cast from the school's Performing Arts Department presents the Broadway musical "Working," beginning May 3.

The adaptation of author Studs Terkel's book of the same name gives an intimate insight into the heart of the nation through the eyes of a factory worker, a teacher, a newspaper boy, an executive, a waitress, and others.

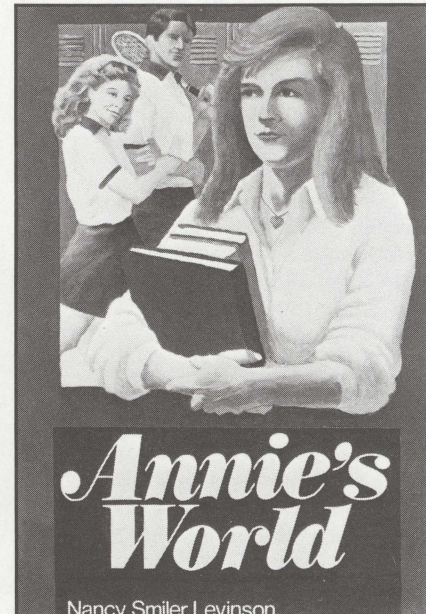

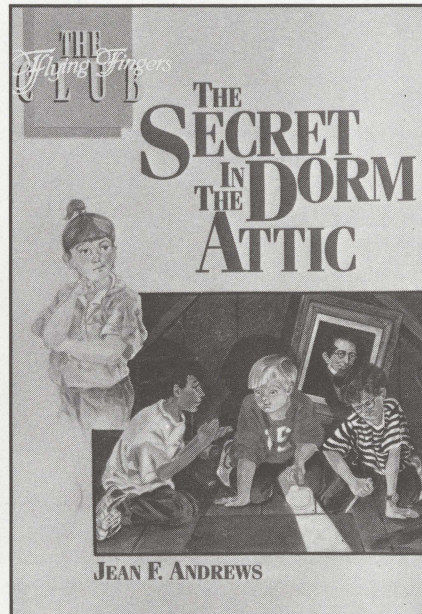

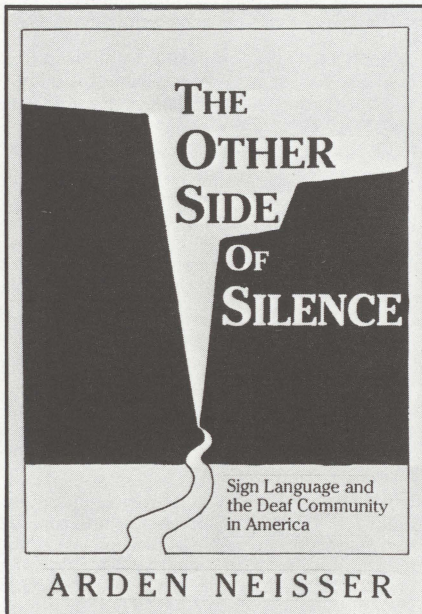

"It's a good show and an important show," Performing Arts Artistic Director Tim McCarty said of "Working." "It allows the actors and the audience to see the person in the job, as opposed to the job itself."

Since the time that "Working" first hit Broadway in the mid-1970s, much has changed in the work world. "It's amazing," said McCarty, who directs the production, "that in that short period of time how different the world of work is—I think primarily because of the computer." No rewrites were made for the MSSD production to compensate for the changes that the decade has brought, said McCarty. "It's the people who are important," he explained.

An extra role was added to the script, however, to portray the prominent social malady of homelessness. "There are so many more homeless people now than in the mid-1970s," McCarty said. "And whether we like it or not, each of us could be one step away from the streets. I want the audience to begin to see homeless people as people."

The role of the homeless person in the musical will be filled by deaf professional actor Mike Lamitola, who is also an assistant director for the production. A graduate of the National Technical Institute for the Deaf and a former member of the National Theatre of the Deaf, Lamitola directed one of MSSD's theater showcase productions 10 years ago and was a faculty member for MSSD's summer institute in 1987.

Working will run May 3, 4, 5, 9, 10, 11, and 12, with performances at 8 p.m., and 10 a.m. matinees on May 4 and 9. Tickets are $5 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. For reservations, call Alice Sutton at x5466.

Morris Goldman, sociology professor from Gallaudet (center), donates his 26-volume album set of Beethoven's music to the University's Music Program March 20. Music Program Director Diane Merchant (right) receives the volume with Jean Boutcher, a Northwest Campus English instructor who also studies music.

You and Your Job

Consultant/contractor versus employee

Various factors must be evaluated to determine whether an individual should be hired as an independent contractor/consultant or as an employee. Entering into an employment relationship subjects the employer to various legal responsibilities and liabilities, including withholding income taxes and meeting requirements for unemployment taxes and worker's compensation.

The relationship with a consultant or contractor is governed primarily by the law of contracts, and there are serious consequences to inappropriately classifying an employee as a consultant or contractor, including penalties for failing to withhold appropriate taxes.

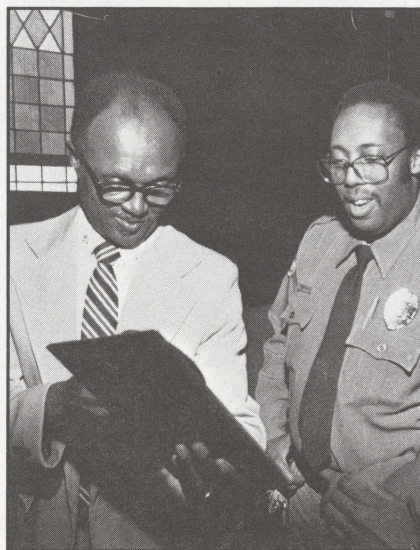

In general, independent contractors or consultants exercise substantial control and initiative over the way they perform a project, operate on a fee basis, generally provide their own supplies and equipment, and are usually retained for completion of a project.

The following guidelines should help clarify the distinction between an employee and a consultant/contractor:

- Instructions: A person who is required to comply with instructions about when, where, and how he or she is to work is usually an employee.
- Hours of work: A person who is required to work a set number of hours is usually an employee. Consultants or contractors set their own schedules.
- Control: If the services are subject to the direction and control of the employer, then an employer/employee relationship is suggested.
- Office/equipment: Working on the employer's premises and using the employer's equipment usually suggests an employer/employee relationship.
- Tasks and products: If the individual is hired to produce a particular product or perform a specific task and is being paid for the end result, then an independent contractor relationship is suggested.
- Payment: Employees are paid on an hourly or biweekly basis. A contractor generally receives a lump sum at the end, or installments tied to stages of the project.
- Right to discharge: An independent contractor or consultant cannot be fired except under the terms of the contract.
- Right to resign: An employee has the right to resign without incurring a liability. An independent contractor or consultant works according to the terms of the contract and may be legally obligated to make good for failure to provide contracted services or products.

Questions about employer/employee relationships or contractual/consulting agreements can be addressed to the Personnel Office or the Office of Contracts and Purchasing.
